Also consider the context and what information is needed in a given context:
When I'm doing more advanced modifications I'm likely to need more info about macros and stuff. Something not yet integrated in our set of interactions. This Is a regular task which is not at all suported by our interface. Mainly because we treat them as navigation items and we are not particulary good in providing great information architecture. Of course, this is a behaviour pattern of a user somewhere between intermediate and expert. Nontheless we should thing about how to support this.

Motivation

Also consider the context and what information is needed in a given context:
When I'm doing more advanced modifications I'm likely to need more info about macros and stuff. Something not yet integrated in our set of interactions. This Is a regular task which is not at all suported by our interface. Mainly because we treat them as navigation items and we are not particulary good in providing great information architecture. Of course, this is a behaviour pattern of a user somewhere between intermediate and expert. Nontheless we should thing about how to support this.
